

The Man Who Won't Work Six Days a Week Asks These Invaders to His Home

The men at home are going to win the war for freedom.

The government of these United States has solved the problem of how to raise and train an efficient army. The Government, through its Food Administrator, is solving the problem of how to feed our people, the army and the allies.

The American men at home—those who produce the food, build the munitions of war, construct the ships, keep the industries of the nation in operation, transport, store, and distribute these goods—these men and their employers will win this war by co-operative effort at home.

The men at the bench is the force that is going to crush Prussianism, Pro-Germanism and Kaiserism, with its policy and practices of atrocities to women, slaughter of children and slavery for men.

Our duty, in this hour of necessity, is clearly marked, and should be clearly understood by every man.

The Loafer Must Go to Work or Get Out

The man who does his duty will work six days a week. The man who does not work six days a week is shirking, slacking, hindering the effort of a soldier over there, and endangering the people over here.

The nation has no room for part-time workers—for those who argue that "this is a free country," therefore a man can work or not work as he chooses.

At this time it is the patriotic duty of every man to recognize the rights and privileges of others. When every minute counts—when every hour of the working day can be made more productive—when every day can bring us nearer victory—no man is a true patriot who steals a minute, an hour or a day for his individual and selfish pleasure.
